Welcome to the end of the world. All that is left are the street dealers. In a city where the mob rules, crime pays. In a city plagued by massive budget cuts that bared out all police forces, cops are reduced to just a handful, those that are alive, barely. Winterfield is an American city where the population lives on the borderline between thriving and collapse. Its streets are ruled by its violent gang of five families, who vie for power and control of the city's underworld, as well as everything they can get their hands on - from drugs to weapons and everything in between. They are so powerful that if you try to do something illegal, they will punish you and everyone around you. People are forced to live through fear and live their lives as if there is no tomorrow. The Dealer revolves around the player and his 10 days to get 10000$. The money he makes must be handled as quick and as clean as possible, and this is the hardest way to get. You have to sell everything you can get to different strangers, face hard moral decisions, avoid cops and dangerous customers, and pay the rent. All of this leads you towards the unusual, unpredictable situation in the fictional version of the United States of America, the year 2020.

HARD CORE GAMEPLAY The Dealer is a hardcore game; one with no save points, no fast travel, no magic items. The player has to survive in a hostile environment. Every item in the game has a high value, a high capacity and a high rareness. You may want to sell something to a customer, but you'll need to justify your decision with many factors. Keep in mind the fact that players are being watched every single time they are selling or buying something. Every action is key in this game. With the right character, the right items and the right amount of conviction, you may end up getting the money you need. However, with everything, there is a risk. You are being watched every single time you do something. Anything you can do to avoid cops and come out unscathed, you may want to do it. LIVING OPEN WORLD The Dealer is a fast-paced, dynamic, living open world that takes place in a post-apocalyptic world where more than half the US population are stricken with a mysterious disease. The disease is slowly killing the people and the country that is, in the year 2020, a high-risk for an economic collapse and rebellion against the government. The living world is the result gutyearchArtist's rendering of two unfinished oil sketches by Robert R. Everett, the architect of the Hyatt Regency in Pasadena and the former president of Pasadena's Chamber of Commerce who died in 1992 at age 87. The Robert R. Everett Collection. Robert Everett Collection By Michael Kraus In 1936, Robert R. Everett sprang from obscurity as a "lifestyle photographer." After a year working with a staff of 9, the fledgling Everett Studios outgrew its location in Pasadena and moved to Culver City, where photographer Sid Fleischman operated the business along with Everett and his wife, May, from an abandoned laundromat. On Dec. 4, I wrote about Everett and his pals at the Goldwyn Studio, whose photos had first sired the movie industry, and he'd left Hollywood to open his own studio in Pasadena. On Dec. 7, I wrote about Everett's parents and wife and their decision to leave downtown Los Angeles and move to California in the '20s. It now appears that the couple, along with one other family, intended to make a permanent move to Los Angeles from the East Coast or Midwest, or possibly other parts of the U.S., according to a pair of notarized affidavits. On Friday, we got in touch with the three remaining members of Everett's family. His older sister, Margaret R. Everett, is married to a Pasadena resident, Everette "J. Walter" Rogers. Their affidavits were filed

Rough Cut Video brings you classic films in a whole new way by allowing you to make choices during the viewing of the film to affect its outcome or reveal hidden information. These interactive versions of films are made by capturing a popular film, editing it to remove the film's original plot, and adding choice elements based on the choices made by people watching the rough cut. The viewer's choices interact with the edited film to alter its outcome by providing different plot elements, and affect the film's ending in a unique and different way compared to the original film. Synopsis: The film begins with a mysterious masked figure stalking a boat trip. As they journey upstate to spend a weekend with their families, they are still pursued by the murderer, from whom they continuously try to flee, until they arrive at their destination at the country house of their 'hosts'. It is then that the killer reveals himself and begins to terrorize and murder the assembled relatives of the host family. In this version, you'll play as the murderer and follow a deadly path of choosing who to harm and what to do. Gameplay: Like any game, the important thing is to make the right choices and collect the right items. Your choices affect the flow of the game. In this game you'll use the following items: *The Key is a special item you only acquire during a cutscene or when it's revealed to you. It's one of the things in the film that was originally plotted but was deleted when it was edited down to make the film a choose-your-own-adventure type, such as the film 'Doctor Doom'. You must have the key to enter a building, save a character, and access other collectible items or to move forward in the game. When you get it, you'll be prompted to hit a button in the game. Hit the button and you'll immediately access the item. *The Phone is used when a character is trapped in a room. Go to the phone in the room they're trapped in and press the red button or you'll be unable to move forward in the game. You'll also be able to hear a character talk to you from the other side of the room. *An Ammeter is used to measure the intensity of a scene. When the meter is at its peak, hit the OK or END button to stop the scene. You'll get a message when the meter goes to its peak. *A Comb is used to pick up certain items. Look c9d1549cdd

What's new:

"The Voice from Heaven" is the twelfth episode of the second season of the American science fiction drama television series The X-Files. The episode was written by series creator Chris Carter, directed by Kim Manners, and originally aired in the United States on December 5, 1993 on the Fox Broadcasting Company. The episode is a continuation of the series' alien rescue theme, and revolves around Mulder and Scully investigating the shooting death of a popular television evangelist John Doggett and tracking down the killer. The show marked the first time that the title card sequence was accompanied by pre- and post-credits musical interludes; they were composed and performed by John Corigliano. The theme song for the episode is "Spin the Bottle", performed by Bruce Hornsby. Plot Opening The episode begins with film of the traditional collage of images depicted on the series' title card, which in this episode comprises a section of a broadcast from a Christian television station that depicts Bishop Michael B. Williams, an evangelist, being shot. Although the footage shows

Bishop Williams' broadcast continuing, it ends as Bishop Williams' body hits the floor. The last image shown in the sequence portrays a group of people sheltering from falling debris, and a narrator explains that the broadcast was ended when Bishop Williams' assailant, John Doggett, enters the frame. Before the show cuts to an exterior shot of the downtown district of an unidentified Pacific Northwest town, John Doggett walks down a street past a loosely tiled signboard that reads: JOHN DOGGETT WELCOME TO GOFF PONDS Title The title of the episode, as well as the credit sequence at the end of the broadcast, borrows directly from the sound of the traditional collage title cards for the series. Episode Bishop Williams hosts a Christian television program called "The Voice From Heaven" where he regularly preaches to church-goers about the deliverance of their lives from evil. Doggett is a patrol agent for the Federal Bureau of Investigation who has been assigned to the case of Bishop Williams' murder after a series of mysterious arson fires have been set to his churches. FBI agent Dana Scully, who is based in San Francisco, investigates a suspect's claim that she has seen the faces of the arsonist lurking in a tree outside of Doggett's neighborhood. Mulder and his partner, Fox Mulder, investigate Bishop
