Thornhill, a quiet provincial town in Canada, where people go about their everyday business and seemingly have no idea there is anything amiss. One morning, Inspector John Nunez – an experienced detective – phones his only friend, Richard Thornhill – a social worker – to tell him there has been another unsolved murder. Together, they must find out who is involved and why all the people that seem important are being so secretive. What better way to begin the investigation than to put themselves inside the players mind and make them decide what to think and what to believe? ... so what's there left to say about the game? Features: Onboarding: Players will be introduced to the game and to the game's world through a 5-10 minute "flythrough" Single Player Experience: Focus on the main story in a traditional adventure style game, where the main character have to make sense of the world around them and then use that knowledge to solve the problem. Playable in all parts of the world and in any part of the day/night Playable in a split-screen, offline or online experience Pathfinding Puzzles: The game is a pure mystery that players will need to use their "logic skills" and connect them to the clues they are given in order to make sense of everything. Explore the world: Players can start in the city and travel the countryside, wherever they feel like to seek out clues and investigate. The path they follow is entirely at their own discretion. Multiple endings: The game does not have a "winning" or "losing" condition and encourages players to be the best investigator they can be. Single Player or Multiplayer: Players can play in the game offline in split-screen mode or online, cooperative and co-op. The world is smart and reacts to players actions: Get to the bottom of a single case and you won't be alone. The world is interactive and reacts to players actions: Get to the bottom of a single case and you won't be alone. How to find your place: Players can choose from a character set of 4 different detectives, each with their own set of skills, abilities, and personality. ... so what's there left to say about the game? Support: To support the game we have set up a Patreon page where people can contribute and become contributors to the project. We do not

(I had chosen Hachinohe's Keio University, but my parents had chosen Yamanashi's Keio University. I'm a student in Keio university, but my parents went for Keio university. My brother went to Rikkyo University, but my mom chose Waseda University and my dad chose Waseda University. My husband went to University of Tokyo, but he chose Kyoto University because Kyoto has an excellent library. Our house is on a hill, and I can't find any city with a beautiful scenery. I asked my parents to take our son back, but they refused.) I live in a small village. It has a lake, a forest, a supermarket, a library, convenience store, and a TV watching room. It has a lot of underaged children. A guy from the village is trying to monopolize underaged children. Several people who know the story do not say anything. I moved to the city. It has a high school. A girl from the village moved here. She moved to a different class. It has a very high school. My neighbors are enthusiastic. The surroundings of the school are too noisy. I moved to the city. It has a college. After I came out of a dorm, the students from the outside have invaded my campus. They are students from the village. I do not understand why. I went back to my hometown. It has no big school and no underaged children c9d1549cdd

Fantasy Grounds - Mini-Dungeon #027: Kaltenheim (5E) Public notice: The rules of D&D are "genius, licensed for personal use only." While we are not likely to obtain any licenses for retail, we welcome writers who want to use the system in self-published works and other noncommercial projects, and we hope that our posts may be of use to them. We ask, however, that they not post the rules used at GameBase or any other third-party website, as that would violate the license. The following was originally posted in GameBase on December 30, 2016. It is being reposted here for those who prefer 5E. Translated from German, this translates as: "Three years ago, the people of the castle were slain in their sleep on Kaldemheim Night. Now, many of those haunt this castle of monsters still. The only ones who can bring respite to the nightmares of these monsters are six brave people from De-Land, a small village some miles southwest." — The locator description of Kaltenheim Hi, everyone! Today, we'll be talking about how to run this high-class Friday Night D&D game for fifth edition rules, as shown in the excellent tabletop RPG Kaltenheim. FNDD'S 6 MAIN IDEAS I want to give a huge shoutout to the magnificent GameBase for allowing me to republish this, as well as to The Watcher in Battle, DukeDerinius, and myriad others of the community, including the articles below, for providing various tips and tricks, and all of the magnificent maps for FNDD. Updates about the rules, these maps, and much more can be found on The Watcher in Battle's Kaltenheim Wiki. If you're unfamiliar with Kaltenheim or haven't played there yet, I recommend reading our mini-dungeon in English ahead of time. Plus, a character for Kaltenheim that was added to my game is in the Appendix, with an illustration of her as soon as you get to the page! There's also a helpful video about running Kaltenheim, and there are a lot of articles on it on The Watcher in Battle about the lore of the setting as well as how you run it. Players start the game at the castle gates, where they meet
