Mike Prisk is a partner at the Washington, D.C. firm Foley Hoag and advises clients on litigation and other transactional matters. No law passed in 2016 will have as much impact on New York as the Commercial Law Revision Commission's "revision and renumbering" of the entire body of New York's civil, criminal and administrative laws and rules, which went into effect on March 13. This revision—which will be completed in 2017—brings myriad changes, some of them small and some of them substantial, to the law. This article will attempt to summarize the most important changes that will impact New York real estate and landlord tenant matters. We will begin with the most obvious: the comprehensive renumbering of laws from the statutes themselves, through the administrative codes to the administrative regulations. Any new statute, code, rule, order or regulation that regulates real estate, landlord tenant or any other real estate related matter will take on the new number. This will occur throughout New York State, because some statutes or codes
