As I said before no magic. Magic is and always will be a science of illusions. There is no such thing. What there is, is imagination. The only magic lies in the human mind. The rest is just fool's gold.... Read More..... John Taylor Steel John Taylor Steel (June 26, 1879, Wigan, Lancashire - August 17, 1966) was an English theologian and historian of Christianity. He was born to John Steel, a socialist and church superintendent, and Mary Ann Taylor. His father was a pioneer socialist who supported Henry Hyndman. After he was five years old, his father took him to America where he remained. Education He received his primary education in Wigan, and obtained a scholarship to attend Central High School, London from 1888 to 1896. In 1896, he won the joint first place for the Cambridge Tripos. He studied at Cambridge University, where he was awarded a second-class degree in

Theology. He also became a Baptist minister. Teaching From 1906 to 1920, he taught English at the International Christian Union Bible School. In 1920, he moved to the United States and became head of the theology department at Drew University in Madison, New Jersey. In 1926, he was the first president of Fuller Theological Seminary. He was a professor there for 42 years, serving as professor of New Testament and Church history and as the university's first regent. He was also Dean of the Theological School, New Testament expert, and a bibliographer of New Testament studies. In 1933, he became co-editor-in-chief of The Five Lo
